About Women in IT Awards

The Women in IT Awards is the technology world's most prominent and influential diversity program. Held for the last three years in London, the 2017 Awards event was attended by over 1,000 business and tech leaders, making it the largest tech diversity event ever staged. With just 25% of computing jobs in the US held by women, and much fewer at senior and executive levels, the event seeks to tackle the industry's gender imbalance by showcasing the achievements of women in technology, identifying new role models and promoting constructive dialogue around diversity among key industry leaders.

Organized by business-technology magazine and website Information Age, the Women in IT Awards has gathered resounding support from trade associations, politicians and companies of all sizes and sectors since launching in 2015.
